Coleman Announces Over $3.5 Million in USDA Rural Development Funding for the Leech Lake Band of Ojibwe

Senator Norm Coleman announced on June 1, 2004, that the Leech Lake Band of Ojibwe will receive over $3.5 million in water and waste disposal funding to upgrade the community's water system.

United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) Rural Development will provide a loan of $1.4 million and two grants totaling $2.2 million to construct a water system that will incorporate the local assorted water systems into one unified waterworks that will serve the entire community.

"I have long been saying that the federal government needs to be making a greater investment in enhancing rural America and Minnesota's basic infrastructure needs," Coleman said. "This grant represents a move in the right direction, but we need to do even more. That is why I have introduced my Rural Renaissance legislation, $50 billion in federal grants aimed at revitalizing America's rural economy."

USDA Rural Development's water and waste disposal system is part of President Bush's efforts to spur economic development in rural areas of America.

Leech Lake Responds to Star/Trib's "The Lost Youth of Leech Lake" Article

By Patsy Gordon

On a few occasions, people were brought to tears by listening to some of the speakers that came forward and expressed their thoughts and feelings during the day and a half "We Are Not Lost" forum that was hosted by the Leech Lake Training Division. Training Coordinator James Allen and the Forum Planning Committee did an excellent job on putting this forum together in short order.

"The Lost Youth of Leech Lake" articles ran in the Minneapolis Star Tribune in late April, written by Larry Oakes. A lot of mixed feelings were brought out by this series, anger, shame, depression, and some were

REZ BRIEFS

Tract 33 Clean Up Day

Tribal Referral Director, Chris Bedeau, organized and supervised a Tract 33 Clean Up Day. Many volunteers pitched in. Bedeau said, "This is a good way for the community to come together, something positive is happening. We've had a great cook-out for all the volunteers, and it's given the people living in their homes on Tract 33 some initiative to come out and help clean up too, many of them just pitched right in with us!" Chris said a follow-up clean-up day will probably be planned for the near future.

Dennis Banks Organizes Walk in Response to Star Tribunes Article "The Lost Youth of Leech Lake"

By Patsy Gordon

In response to the series of "The Lost Youth of Leech Lake" that appeared in the Minneapolis Star Tribune in late April, Leech Lake Band member, Dennis Banks, organized the "We Are Not All On Drugs" walk that took the walkers from Federal Dam to Walker to Cass Lake to Bena and back again to Federal Dam. This walk took them all around Leech Lake. It is hoped that this walk will bring awareness to the fact that not "all" Leech Lake Youth and Band members are addicted to drugs and alcohol.

Most of you, as De-Bah-Ji-Mon readers, will recall "The Lost Youth of Leech Lake" series of articles, as I know they were read by many of you. The articles talked of several different young people who are also Band members and how the drugs and alcohol has affected their lives. The ordeal of Darryl Headbird and Sierra Goodman and the story of Tara Hare, amongst others, was included in the series. The article brought out many different feelings and opinions of its readers. The reactions were amongst sadness, shame, anger, disgust, and there were some that agreed with the authors. Many felt that the articles made it appear that all Leech Lake youth and residents were doomed to live a life of despair addicted to drugs and alcohol.

In reality, there are many Leech Lake Band members who are living productive lives, do hold down jobs, take care of their children, and are not addicted to drugs and alcohol. But no mention of this was made in the series of articles.

The "We Are Not All On Drugs" walk began every morning for four days at 7:00 in the morning with a pipe ceremony. Walk organizer, Banks, said "I am disgusted at the glad that these types of situations were finally brought to light. After some time has passed and the forum was presented in regards to this, I heard and witnessed that many feelings have changed from anger to even thanking Larry Oakes, that "he brought a wake up call to Leech Lake".

Chairman Peter White opened the forum with an introduction and a healing song. White said, "I don't think the Anishinabe will ever be lost. This is who we are, this is where we're from." He went on to say, "I guarantee you the same kinds of stories heard here can be heard in any community around." He said "From the streets of Inger to Capitol Hill I will represent the Anishinabe people with proudness and with no fear."

Cass Lake Mayor Elaine Fleming talked about how as a young woman she wanted to get away from Cass Lake. She said she just wanted to get in her second hand car and go. She said, "I was going to leave the drugs and the alcohol and this dysfunctional community behind, but everywhere I went, it was there too!" She got the audience up and clapping and yelling for the good things the community is doing now and for all the good things it's going to do in the future. Fleming told about the "Healing Garden" that has been planted and how it has been dedicated to young women. Two of those young women are Heather Casey and Faye Nelson, who both lost their lives where drugs and alcohol played a part in both of their deaths, either directly or indirectly. The Mayor said, "Our young women are sacred."

Cass County Judge, John Smith, talked about his role as a judge in the court systems. He told how he's witnessed many tears, hardship and loss because of crimes committed. He said, "It's a sad thing, so needless."

Gary Charwood challenged teens to do their part in the fight against drugs and alcohol. Eight young people took him up on his challenge on the spot and agreed to

Star Tribunes articles' inference that Native youth are lost and that our households are rampant with drug use. This is not the land where dreams are lost, it is the land where dreams are made and begin!"

be sober and drug free for one year. When they committed themselves to this venture they were given a "Lakota Rose" bracelet that symbolized their commitment. At the end of one year, they are to pass it on to someone else that commits themselves to the same venture.

I believe it was the general consensus of almost everyone in attendance that not only the family has to heal, but the community has to heal as a whole. Brian Shotley from the White Bison Society said, "There is hope. The Creator doesn't give us a problem without giving us a solution and our solution is right here in our own community."

Fran King maintained her composure while reading a very emotional and touching statement that she had read to the court as an impact statement in the sentencing of the young man who was charged with the death of young Heather Casey. Many people felt her anguish and pain and were brought to tears. Fran's daughter was best friends with Heather. Fran said her daughter is still grieving today and trying to recover from her best friends death.

Sienna Mulbah, 23 year old college graduate, sat on a panel and testified that "not all youth are bad" and that they can succeed. She is living proof.

Randy Finn from the Boys and Girls Club Board of Directors said they have raised $5,000 seed money to start building a new Boys and Girls Club. Construction will start on this endeavor in the next 2 to 3 years. Randy said, "If you help the kids, they will help you!"

I, myself, came away from this forum, with the thought of "What if we (this community) are being used as an example?" and "wouldn't it be wonderful if we could recover from all of the drug addiction, alcoholism, poverty, etc., and go on to be a living example of how you can come back from the depths of despair?" The forum was an excellent meeting and everyone has high hopes that we are now on the "brink of recovery" in the words of Fran King!

Leech Lake Band of Ojibwe Nation and U.S. Government Public Meeting

The U.S. Federal Government (Army Corps of Engineers and Forest Service) and the sovereign Leech Lake Band of Ojibwe Nation will conduct public scoping meetings to gather input on the potential effects of new reservoir operation plan alternatives to be studied under the Mississippi River Headwaters Reservoir Operation Plan Evaluation (ROPE). The meetings will be used to present potential impacts that will be studied in detail within the ROPE, and to obtain additional tribal input regarding possible alternative plans and associated impacts that should be studied but are not currently planned. These meetings will serve to meet the National Environmental Policy Act scoping requirement. As part of the environmental impact statement, comments are requested from persons or organizations that may be interested or affected.

The scoping meetings will be held in an informal open house format that will consist of a short presentation of current information on the ROPE followed by a session for gathering citizen and stakeholder inputs. Participants are welcome to come at any time during the session; they should plan to spend at least 20 minutes to view the presentation and have their questions answered.

The first meeting for the Leech Lake Band of Ojibwe Nation will be held from 2:00 to 4:00 p.m., Tuesday, June 15, 2004, at the American Legion Post #284, Cass Lake, MN 56633.

The second meeting will be held from 5:00 to 8:00 p.m., Tuesday, June 15, 2004, at the Northern Lights Casino, 6800 Y Frontage Road NW, Walker, MN 56484.

Meetings are also being coordinated with interagency and other public interests to gather additional pertinent study related input. For more information on these meetings, please contact Aaron Snyder at 651-290-5489 or Aaron.M.Snyder@usace.army.mil or Gina Papisodora at 218-335-2940/1-800-442-3942 or llthpo@paulbunyan.net.

Leech Lake Family Services Programs

The programs in the Human Services Division are designed to stabilize Indian families and to protect and safeguard children from problems that endanger themselves and the family. Specific program objectives are to provide in-home family counseling to prevent family violence and out-of-home placements; support the reunification process; provide education and resources on basic living and parenting skills; provide crisis intervention; serve as court advocates; license and monitor foster home care; and provide information and referrals regarding available social services as needed or requested.

The following are some of the programs that the Social Services program offers:

INDIAN CHILD WELFARE ACT (ICWA) – The social workers provide child protection services in conjunction with the various counties surrounding the Leech Lake Reservation. The workers attend court cases, advocating for families with the best interest of the child in mind.

FOSTER CARE – This program provides Indian foster care license on and off the reservation. The Leech Lake foster homes are intended to provide a safe, stable environment for children until they can be reunited with their families.

ADOPTION – This program provides interested persons with information concerning adoption. The worker will complete a home study and this person will then become a prospective adoptive parent. If a child becomes available, the worker will attempt to match this child with the prospective parents on file. The worker will become an advocate for the family until the final adoption decree.

ATTENDANCE INTERVENTION – This program is set up to intervene when a child is missing a substantial number of school days. It is the policy of the Leech Lake Tribal Council to encourage education and learning among its members. In order to facilitate this policy, the Tribal Council enacted a resolution on compulsory school attendance. The intervention staff will work with a family to resolve issues that are contributing to the attendance problem.

Consider Fostering or Adopting an American Indian Child

"There is no resource...more vital to the continued existence and integrity of Indian Tribes than our children."

The Federal Indian Child Welfare Act recognized "that there is no resource...more vital to the continued existence and integrity of Indian Tribes than their children" and also recognized the essential Tribal relationships of Indian peoples and their cultural and social standards prevailing in Indian communities and families.

The Minnesota Indian Family Preservation Act reflects the state policy to protect the best interests of Indian children and promote the stability and security of Indian families by placements into homes, which reflect the unique values of Indian communities.

FAMILIES: American Indian foster and adoptive parents come from all walks of life. They are married, single (male or female), divorced or widowed. Some have large families and some are childless. They may have large or small incomes, own their home or rent an apartment.

CHILDREN: American Indian children who wait for families of their own are children ages birth to seventeen years and may have physical, emotional or educational disabilities, or their special need may be only that they are brothers and sisters who should be placed together. Indian children have tender roots. Loving mature families are needed to be foster care and adoptive parents.

FOSTER CARE: Foster care is intended to provide a safe, stable environment for children until they can be reunited with their families. Interested families will participate in an educational process in which the family and the agency will get to know each other. The agency wants to know if you are loving, mature, know how to discipline in a non-physical way, and if you have financial support to care for yourself without the foster care dollars. You will want to know what the agency expects of you and whether they will provide training to handle children with special needs.

ADOPTION: Adoption is the legal and emotional acceptance into your family, a child not born to you. That child carries the same legal rights as a birth child and bears your name. Adoption must be approved by a court of law, and that approval is followed by an official adoption decree and a birth certificate with your name as the parent.

To be an adoptive parent you don't have to be rich, own your own home, be married, or be a "super parent". You do need to be loving, mature, know how to manage your income, and be over 21 years of age. The agency will expect you to participate in an orientation meeting before assigning you a social worker to begin your individual adoption or home study. This is not an investigation, but an educational process to learn more about the kind of child you might best parent and the agency learns how to best match a child to your family.

Your Rights Under the Indian Child Welfare Act

What is the Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA)? The ICWA is a federal law that creates strict standards for state courts to follow in Indian child court proceedings. The ICWA declares, "The policy of this Nation is to protect the best interests of Indian children and to promote the stability and security of Indian Tribes and families.

What proceedings are governed by the ICWA? The ICWA governs state court proceedings concerning the custody of an Indian child, including foster care placement, termination of parental rights, and adoptive placement. The law does not apply to parental custody in a divorce proceeding, or to placement based upon an act, which would be criminal if committed by an adult. ICWA does not apply to Tribal Court proceedings, which are governed by Tribal law.

How does ICWA define the Indian child? ICWA applies only to proceedings involving the custody of an "Indian child", which means any unmarried person who is under age 18 and is either a member of an Indian Tribe or eligible for membership in an Indian Tribe. ICWA defines the term "Indian" to include Tribal members and Alaska Natives.

What rights do Indian parents/custodians have under ICWA? State courts must notify the parents and any person who has legal or temporary custody whenever the court has reason to know the proceedings involve an Indian child. Indigent Indian parents/custodians are entitled to court-appointed counsel and to rehabilitative services designed to preserve the family. Indian custodians = persons who have been granted temporary physical custody by the parent – no writing or court is necessary. An Indian parent's voluntary consent to foster placement or termination of parental rights is invalid unless executed before a judge in writing at least ten days after the birth of the child. Consent may be withdrawn at any time prior to entry of a final order or within two years in the event of fraud or duress.

What rights to Tribes have under ICWA? The United States Supreme Court has recognized that Tribes have no interest in their children that is distinct from and on a par with that of parents. Tribal courts have exclusive jurisdiction concerning custody of reservation-domiciled Indian children who are wards of Tribal Court. Tribal courts have concurrent jurisdiction concerning all Tribal children, wherever they reside. State courts must give "full faith and credit" to Tribal court proceedings, meaning they generally must respect and enforce such rulings. State courts must ensure notice of an Indian child custody proceeding in State court is given to the child's Tribe, which has the right to intervene. The Tribe may request transfer to Tribal Court, or advocate for family reunification or other placement. The Tribe may by resolution alter the ICWA placement preferences. The Tribe may obtain upon request a record of any state court placement of a Tribal child, together with evidence of efforts made to comply with the ICWA placement preferences. Tribes and States may enter into agreements regarding jurisdiction and custody matters.

Leech Lake Youth Division Gets Involved With VERB Program

By Patsy Gordon

Thanks to G&G Advertising from Albuquerque, New Mexico, the company coordinated and implemented a VERB, It's What You Do, Native Style activity zone day in collaboration with the Leech Lake Youth Division. The Youth Activity Day was held on Saturday, May 15, 2004 from noon until 5:00 p.m. at the Bug-O-Nay-Ge-Shig School. Kids from different reservations throughout the State of Minnesota attended and participated. It was a sunny day, with just the right amount of breeze for the kids to really enjoy themselves as they took part in sac races, 100 yard dashes, 3 on 3 basketball tournaments, hula hooping, football toss, and lacrosse, to name some of the activities.

Everyone that went out and participated in at least one of the activities, were given a VERB t-shirt, a VERB ball, stickers, and a VERB poster. Bottled water and granola candy bars were available to keep the kids hydrated and energized.

In addition to these events,

Lacrosse was one of the activities that these youth chose to take part in. Jerry Morgan coached. Photo by Patsy Gordon

Miss Indian World, Delana Smith from Red Lake attended the event and danced with the crowd while Jerry Morgan drummed and sang. Leech Lake honored Miss Indian World with a quilt. Also honored with quilts, were Mary Ann Gerst and Gerald Gray, Sr. from the VERB office and Leech Lake Band member, Jerry Morgan.

Closing out the day was "Native Reign" a Native American dance group from Montana who put on a spectacular performance. One of the members I remember in particular was Lauren, one of the young women dancers. The leader of the group announced that she was drug and alcohol free and had not missed one single day of school all through her high school years. That's amazing.

I visited with Mary Ann Gerst of G&G Advertising. She said, "It's very important for kids to go out and get at least one hour of exercise every day!" That's what VERB is all about, making physical activity fun and challenging. The following is some of what the VERB program says:

The challenge is a lack of physical activity. Physical inactivity is a serious problem for many children. The solution is making physical activity fun and challenging. Encourage children to participate in 60 minutes of moderate-to-vigorous activity every day. Motivate kids to get involved in supervised activities or support their initiative to be active on their own. Investigate whether your school and community center have recreational activities, such as basketball and soccer, for youth on weekends or after school. Search for activities to do "around the house" like shooting hoops, dancing, picking berries, hiking, playing catch or kickball, riding horses or bicycles. Use the seasons to inspire outdoor activities, like skiing and snowshoeing in winter, and swimming in the summer.

The challenge is that communities or schools lack resources. Some areas lack playgrounds, courts, or after-school programs. The solution is becoming an advocate. Talk to teachers and administrators. Ask them to support daily physical education and other school programs that promote lifelong physical activity. Make sure your

Tribal College Holds Annual 2004 Art Show

By Duane Goodwin

The 2004 art show was again a very successful event for the Leech Lake Tribal College and Bemidji State University. The May 7th awards banquet attracted people from the community and provided them with the opportunity to meet the artists and hear their stories behind their art.

Carl Gawboy honored us with being our guest speaker while Jon Romer, Rocky Mountain, and Helen Wassegjig added music with a very warm and relaxing pleasure to the art show environment.

It was said by many people that "The feeling here is electrifying and extremely joyful. The excitement is so high it's like being at the academy awards!"

The evening came to an end with a fine dinner prepared by faculty, staff, students, and volunteers from the community. We had door prizes with the size of a give away. Contributors included the

Elders Chair: Betty Staples Keeps A Watchful Eye Out For Storms

By Patsy Gordon

The night before I went to Betty Staples' home to interview her for the newspaper, it stormed. Betty greeted me at her door and said, "I didn't get much sleep last night, I was afraid of the wind!" I asked her if she was afraid of storms. She said, "I think my mother did that to me, every time it was storming out, she would take all of us kids down to the neighbor's house." She'd say, "Let's go down to Esther's." Her mother felt more secure there whenever a storm would come their way. Betty said, "My dad would stay home and sleep though." Her memories of those times are of her mother and Esther sitting up all night and visiting, and keeping an eye out on the weather. When they returned home, she said, her Dad would still be fast asleep.

Betty was born to Charles Staples and Margaret Charwood on July 19, 1936. She was raised with her 10 siblings at the Mission. She had 6 sisters and 4 brothers. She has lost 2 of her brothers and one of her sisters. She reminisced about her days as a child and young woman. They had no electricity or indoor plumbing in their home. Since electricity was not made available to the Mission Community for many years during Betty's life there as a child, her family had to use kerosene lamps for lighting. They used wood burning stoves to heat their home and to cook their meals. Water was hauled from a neighbor's pump. The kids got their baths in the wash tub that Betty's mother used for washing their clothes. When her mother washed clothes, she would also melt snow and icicles to use for the wash water. She used a wash board to get the clothes clean and then hung them outside on the lines to dry. Betty said, "She did this all winter long!"

Betty said they always had fish and rabbit to eat. They also ate venison, whenever someone would give them some, and when her mother would clean ducks for someone they always gave her some of the ducks too. Betty's father would trap muskrats and sell the fur, but no part of the muskrat went to waste because the family would eat that too. Betty said, "That's good baked."

Betty said that since she was the oldest of the eleven children she was responsible for helping her Mom out with most everything. She said she did the laundry too, she cooked so she could "feed the little brats" (in Betty's words), and babysat. She said she was always babysitting every time her Mom and Dad had to go somewhere. Her parents took them to the town every 4th of July. When Betty was young, she said that was the only pow-wow that Leech Lake had every year. The pow-wows were held in the old park by the school, what we know today as Dreamcatcher Park.

Betty attended school in Bemidji. After dropping out in the 7th grade, she later successfully obtained her general education degree (GED) in 1967.

Betty had 4 children, 3 girls and 1 boy, Cindy, Dan Jr., Patti and Jane. Patti currently resides in Minneapolis but Jane and Dan Jr. live in Cass Lake. Betty lost her daughter Cindy to breast cancer in 1996. Cindy was only 42 years old. Her children have blessed her with 15 grandchildren.

Many of us may know Betty Staples, or her name may sound familiar, but you can't place where you know her from. Well, Betty worked for Tribal Enrollment for 31 years! The Bureau of Indian Affairs contracted the Tribal Enrollment program from 1972, when Betty first started with the program, until 1990, when the Minnesota Chippewa Tribe took over the program operations. Betty still stayed with the program until October of 2003. Even at 67 years old, Betty is feeling good and healthy and wants to go back to work! She said, "I don't like being home doing nothing." So she is currently looking for a job.

One set back for Betty though is she doesn't have any transportation immediately available to her. But she says her sisters always come over and take her grocery shopping and to her appointments. Her daughter Jane goes to her house often and cleans for her.

Memorial Day family get togethers are Betty's favorite time of the year. She says there's always lot of relatives sitting around visiting. Most memorial days include a picnic at the Mission grave yard where the family graves are at.

Before our visit ended, I asked Betty if she got the paper out where she lives. She said, "Oh yes, someone always brings it to me." She continued with, "I just love them stories about the elders. I just sit there and think about them and what they must have done, even if I don't know them."

"Honor the Elder's Feast Turns Out to be Quite the Party!"

By Patsy Gordon

Groups of sisters merrily dancing, seniors "getting down and jivin'" with the music, "tearin' up" the feast that was laid before their hungry eyes and stomachs, table top dancing, giddy women, and festive settings surrounded the packed Veterans Memorial Building where the Elders Feast was held on Saturday, May 8th, 2004. Each year the Leech Lake Housing Authority puts on a feast not to be outdone by anyone, anywhere (in honor of our elders)! Walleye, fry bread, apple pie, blueberry cheese cake, wild rice hot dish, and much more was dished out to the hungry and anticipating takers. Each year, Leech Lake Housing employee, Greg Anderson, does a great job frying up those walleye. What a wonderful job he does.

Ron Hare and Kenn Mitchell emcee the event. Richard Schulman, Orrin Beaulieu, James Allen, Jr., and recording artist, Mitch Walking Elk, were all there to provide the group with musical entertainment that sated their entertainment appetites as well as the food. The event even had one lady get up on top of a table and dance. ...And here I thought that happened only in Mexico!

Another job well done... Thank you Leech Lake Housing Authority!

Writing Workshop for Indian (High School) Students

Location: Michigan, United States
Summer Program Date: 2004-07-10

"Writing Place," a one-week creative writing workshop, will bring together American Indian high school students from Michigan and other states.

Together, students and faculty will consider issues of location and environment--the stories of who we are, where we come from, and where our imaginations can take us. The program will include readings by well-known American Indian writers Mark Turcotte (Turtle Mountain Band of Chippewa) and Susan Power (Standing Rock Sioux); writing workshops; and field trips to places that are significant to local Native communities. Students will have the opportunity to work not only with these professional writers but with outstanding creative writing faculty members such as Diane Seuss, who was honored last year with the College's esteemed Florence J. Lucasse Award for Excellence in Teaching.

At the end of the week, students will have the opportunity to read pieces of their work and to include them in the group's self-compiled publication. Thanks to generous support from Kalamazoo College and the Kellogg Foundation, we are able to fully fund each accepted student (including travel expenses). Applications are being accepted on a rolling basis until the twenty available spots are filled. Please contact us with any questions.

Audit Says Bug-O-Nay-Ge-Shig School Doing Great

By Giniwogiishig, Ogiimaans (Henry Flocken)

The Center for School Improvement (CSI), in tandem with the BIA Office of Indian Education Programs (OIEP), recently came on campus and audited our Comprehensive School Reform grant (CSR), Consolidated School Reform Plan (CSR/P or Strategic Plan), Gifted and Talented, and Special Education programs.

Rubrics were used to measure our school's success in a variety of areas. The questions centered on proof of involvement in decision making and planning by the stakeholders – students, parents, staff and administration. They also looked at our data feedback systems and operations to make sure our school business is efficient and effective. Their benchmark or target for us was set at 3 on a scale of 1-5. They interviewed students, parents, teachers, school board, and administration to form a 360 degree perspective on their questions. After combining the interview results we hit their mark of 3. This means we are on schedule in our plan for reformation. Next year our benchmark will be 4 on the descriptive rubrics. The year after, we will be at a 5 as planned.

Areas for continuing development are: K-12 curriculum, professional development, and data feedback and analysis.

Areas for strength cited are: foresight of administration to move our strongest teachers to K-3 to improve reading and math foundations, information of dissemination such as this newsletter, school board trainings with NISBA, evaluations and development plans in place, cultural training and involvement by all staff, and our strong commitment to have a safe and drug free school.

The auditors were extremely impressed with the student's respectful behavior. They said they have visited many schools throughout the country and our students were the best. They praised our staff for being dedicated and working beyond the call of duty.

I challenge anyone who has any negative word or perception about our school to come and visit for a day. They will see how beautiful our children are. They will see students engaged in learning. They will see our hero teachers in action. They will see the efficiency and speediness of our staff – working late hours voluntarily. They will see board members going out of their way to participate on committees they are asked to serve. We have a motto here at the school that always rings true, "I am smart, I am beautiful, and I can do anything."

Cass Lake/Bena 2nd Grade Class Goes On An Adventure!

By Patsy Gordon

Mrs. Wimme's 2nd grade class will have a memory that will last them a lifetime. Mrs. Wimme and her class are thrilled and excited! How many of you got to go to Maryland and put your "Toes in the Ocean" when you were in second grade as an entire class? Well, that's exactly what this second grade class is going to do. By the time you read this article, they will already be back. "Toes in the Ocean" is what this class trip is titled.

The class had been communicating as pen pals with other second graders at a school in Belkamp, Maryland. One of the students' pen pals had sent her a birthday invitation. The student asked Mrs. Wimme if she could go. Mrs. Wimme's first thought was to tell her no and explain why. Well, she began to think – Cass Lake Elementary has what is called "responsive classroom". Its goal is to teach kids that they can reach their hopes and dreams and that they are attainable. After researching the idea thoroughly and making sure it was okay with the principal, the school board, and the rest of the 2nd grade "team", she was given the go ahead to try and make this dream trip come true for her entire 2nd grade class. She sent letters home to her students parents and told them that if they were willing to help raise money for the trip, that together her, the class and the parents could make this happen. Mrs. Wimme said, "I had 100% parent participation!"

The 2nd grade students themselves raised $4,000.00. The Leech Lake Tribal Council donated $6,195.00, where Chairman Pete White went to the class and presented them with the check. The students asked questions as to how he got to be the Chairman and what he did in his position as Chairman.

It is their hope to raise enough funds so that each student depend on you every day.

Watch over the animals and our people that live in this sacred way. Give them shelter and food to help survive "Grandfather Sun" to live another day.

As you come to the close of your journey setting in the Western Sky I ask that you take pity on the people who have caused Mother Earth to cry.

Thanks once again "Grandfather Sun" for making this my day. Share a ray of your light and send the sunshine my way.

Mi'iw

Grandfather Sun (Mishomis Geezis)

By Dan Wilson

Good Morning "Grandfather Sun", welcome to a new day
Once again I offer my tobacco for the journey you start this day.

Rising in the Eastern Sky and shining throughout the day
Thank you for the warmth and sunshine, you provide as you travel this way.

Your appearance in the morning sky has kept Mother Earth healthy,
The plants and all living things be honored with a birthday cake to celebrate all of their birthdays.

Students from Mrs. Wimme's class will perform a Native American dance program for the Belkamp 2nd graders with a tape provided by and of Chairman Pete White. Chairman White and his drum group will be taped for this event at the Memorial Day pow-wow. The drum group will tape an eagle song and the 2nd grade class will dance to it in the Belkamp classroom.

The next day, Wednesday, the Cass Lake students will get a tour of the White House. How exciting! That afternoon, they will get to go and see an ocean aquarium where they will see ocean life close up. They will participate in a dolphin program where the dolphins will be in "dolphin tanks".

Thursday, they will get to visit Chesapeake Bay in Delaware. The students will swim in the ocean and go crabbing with a tour guide. They will witness coastal and shore life first hand. They will stay in Delaware Thursday night.

Friday will take them to Niagara Falls in New York. Immediately following the Niagara Falls tour, the group will leave for home. They will arrive back home in Cass Lake late Saturday, June 5th.

Take An Amazing Road Trip This Summer

By Patsy Gordon

Are you one of those people/families that love to take off (whether on the spur of the moment or carefully planned) weekend road trips? Well, have I got a trip for you! Maybe some of you have already been there, but if you haven't you truly must go!

The Vince Shute Wildlife Sanctuary is located near Orr, Minnesota on the Nett Lake Indian Reservation.

I first visited the Wildlife Sanctuary about 8 years ago and have been back twice since. Each time I visit it is just as exciting as the first time I visited. Directions will come later in this article.

Each time I have gone I have had close encounters with many, many black bears, big and small. Vince Shute has since passed on, but when I first started to visit the Sanctuary, Vince was still alive and would come and sit outside a small trailer located at the site to visit with the people. I sat down and talked to him on my first trip there and the following is part of what he told me about how the Sanctuary got started.

Several years ago, Vince and other loggers used this area to camp while they went to other nearby locations to log. They would leave early in the morning and return to their campsites after dark. Most every day when they got back they would find that their campsites had been ransacked. They knew it was the hungry bears that were getting into their tents/shacks and feasting on their food supply. It grew to be quite a nuisance so the loggers started to shoot the bears to try and keep them away.

Well, since that didn't work, Shute came up with the idea of feeding them. He started to put food outside and after some time a mutual trust was built between him and the bears. They became friends, he began to know them individually. It wasn't long before Shute became known as "The Bearman".

Soon the word was out amongst the bears. They all learned of this place where they knew they could get fed. They started to come in in the evenings by great numbers. The last time I visited the area, I counted over 40 bears that were all there at the same time. The trained bear keepers walked right amongst the bears within an arms reach and put the food out for them to eat.

When I first started going there, there was an observation deck a few feet off the ground that you could observe the bears from. But the bears were coming right up to us as we got out of our cars in the parking lot. They were friendly and were not afraid of us humans. I wasn't real trusting of them at first, and I guess when I go back this summer, I still won't be 100% trusting of them. But believe me, it is something to see – so many bears all at one time!

The following information was taken from the Vince Shute Wildlife Sanctuary website.

After Shute's health began to fail him in the fall of 1994, he became concerned about what would happen to the bears should he have to leave his home there. As a means of securing their future, Shute donated his interest in the land to caring friends who offered their help. Surrounding property was subsequently purchased. Today, 360 acres comprise what is now known as the "Vince Shute Wildlife Sanctuary". On January 6, 1995, the American Bear Association was established as a means of managing and operating this refuge. As many as 50 bears have been sighted at one time from the observation deck.

How do I get there, you ask. Well, travel Highway 53 north to one mile south of Orr, turning left on County Road 23. Continue on CR 23 for 13 miles. Watch for the Vince Shute Wildlife Sanctuary sign approximately 100 yards past CR 514 on the right.

The Sanctuary is open from Memorial Day to Labor Day at 5:00 p.m. to dusk. It is closed on Mondays. Admission is free, donations are accepted. For more information you can call 1-800-357-9255. Group tours and school groups are welcome by reservation.

Annual Conference For Native Americans Targets Heart Disease and Diabetes

Centuries ago Native Americans roamed the Great Plains and river valleys following wild game. Buffalo and venison were the mainstay of their diet. The people gathered berries, dug prairie turnips and mouse beans, harvested wild rice, hunted small game, caught and dried fish, and collected plants for tea and medicine. The natural world provided everything that the people needed to survive. The people were active and very fit. Many experts attribute the origin of diabetes and heart disease among Native Americans to the reservation era which began in the 1800's as tribal peoples were confined to small reservations with limited resources. They were no longer allowed to hunt and gather their foods as they had done for centuries, instead the government gave them rations commonly called commodities. More than a century ago, these commodities largely consisted of white flour, sugar, and salt pork. Out of these three came one of today's delicacies: frybread which is often mistaken for a traditional food.

Today's diet, which much more nutritious, is still vastly different in composition than traditional foods. Instead of venison and buffalo, it's processed luncheon meat and canned pork. Instead of berries picked ripe off bushes, it's canned fruit in sugar syrup. Instead of wild rice, it's commercial cereals frosted with sugar. Instead of herbal tea, it's pop. These changes in diet permanently affected Native Americans, and led to a host of illnesses, among them diabetes and heart disease.

Diabetes is particularly destructive in the Native American community, where it is not uncommon to see diabetes patients with renal failure on kidney dialysis machines or who have undergone amputations. The rates of these and other complications, among them blindness and heart disease, are much higher in Native Americans. In some Indian communities the rate of diabetes among the elders approaches 100%. The disease itself and its complications are among the leading causes of death among Native Americans. Mortality rates for diabetes are 166% higher in the Native American population than in the general population. Diabetes is four to eight times more prevalent in Native Americans than in the general population.

To provide information and support for diabetes and heart patients and their families, the Shakopee Mdewakanton Sioux Community is once again sponsoring the Northern Plains Native American Heart and Diabetes Conference, July 19 and 20, 2004. The two diseases share many of the same health issues. Many of the approaches for identifying who is at risk for diabetes and heart disease are similar" reviewing family history, obtaining blood pressure and cholesterol screenings, and blood glucose screening. Also, preventive efforts for both diseases are similar, like lifestyle changes, diet habits, exercise habits, smoking cessation, limiting alcohol intake, and regular health care check ups.

Conference participants will be able to choose to attend break out sessions including: What's Cooking, Basic Steps to Serving More Nutritious Meals; Wake Up and Smell the Roses!; Exercise, Treating Tobacco Dependence State-of-the-Art; the Chain of Survival and CPR; Eyes, Teeth, Feet, and Diabetes; Healthy Lifeways for Native People; and Medicine Talk. For further questions or comments, please call the SMSC Health Department at 952-496-6150. Additional information and registration forms are also available at www.shakopeedakota.org.

Minnesotans urged to learn five warning signs of stroke

Do you know the five warning signs of stroke? If you answered "no", you're not alone. In a recent study by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, only 22.8 percent of Minnesotans knew the five warning signs. Results from the other 16 states in the study indicated a similar lack of awareness of stroke's warning signs.

Not knowing the five warning signs could be a matter of life and death. Stroke is the third leading cause of death in the U.S. and a major cause of disabilities among adults. Approximately 50 percent of stroke deaths occur before the person reaches the hospital. Much of the burden of stroke could be reduced if more people knew the five warning signs and then called 911 at the first suspicion of stroke.

The five warning signs are:

1. Sudden confusion, trouble speaking or understanding.

2. Sudden numbness or weakness of the face, arm or leg, especially on one side of the body.
3. Sudden trouble seeing in one or both eyes.
4. Sudden trouble walking, dizziness or loss of balance or coordination.
5. Sudden severe headache with no known cause.

"Much of the death and disability from stroke could be prevented if stroke victims get medical care very quickly," said Minnesota Commissioner of Health Dianne Mandernach. "During Stroke Awareness Month, we urge Minnesotans to learn the five warning signs of stroke. Then, if you observe any of these signs in yourself or another, call 911 immediately."

For more information, please contact the American Stroke Association, a Division of the American Heart Association, at (952) 835-5828.

Fish Consumption Advisory

Choose fish, but choose wisely, health department says Fish Consumption Advisory helps consumers minimize risks from contaminants in fish Minnesotans concerned about their health are wise to include fish in their diet, but need to be aware of the risks posed by contaminants in fish.

That's the main message contained in the Minnesota Department of Health's annual fish consumption advisory, updated and released each spring to help consumers make wise choices about the kinds of fish they eat and how often to eat fish. The advisory is available online or in brochure format by contacting the department.

"Fish is an excellent food source, high in protein, vitamins and minerals and low in saturated fat," said Minnesota Commissioner of Health Dianne Mandernach. "And studies have shown that eating fish may help prevent heart disease in adults. However, even fish should be eaten in moderation," Mandernach said, "because any fish could contain harmful chemicals, such as mercury or polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs)."

The advisory provides guidelines on how much fish people can safely consume while minimizing their risks from contaminants. The advisory contains guidelines for both sport-caught and commercial fish. Generally, the smaller the fish the safer, but some species tend to accumulate more contaminants than others.

"In terms of safety, not all fish are created equal," said Patricia McCann, an environmental scientist for MDH who analyzes data on both Minnesota-caught and commercial fish. "And good choices about fish are not the same for everybody."

Pregnant and breastfeeding women, women who are planning to be pregnant and children under 15 are more sensitive to contaminants and need to take extra precautions to minimize their risks from eating fish. This does not mean, however, that

STDs Increase Six Percent

Sexually transmitted diseases increase 6 percent in 2003; education, prevention, detection needed to combat STDs. The number of reported sexually transmitted diseases (STDs) in Minnesota rose 6 percent in 2003, following a 19 percent rise in cases in 2002, according to new data released by the Minnesota Department of Health (MDH).

A total of 14,111 reportable STD cases were recorded by MDH in 2003 compared to the 13,318 cases in 2002.

"The continued growth of sexually transmitted diseases emphasizes the need for continued education and early detection," said Dr. Harry Hull, state epidemiologist and director of the Division of Infectious Disease Epidemiology, Prevention and Control at MDH. "Practicing safe sex reduces your chances of getting an STD. Getting tested and treated will prevent spreading to partners."

Chlamydia, gonorrhea and syphilis are the bacterial STDs that are monitored in Minnesota. Cases of chlamydia rose 6 percent - from 10,118 cases in 2002 to 10,714 in 2003. Cases of gonorrhea climbed 5 percent - from 3,051 cases in 2002 to 3,202 cases in 2003. The number of syphilis cases jumped 31 percent - from 149 cases in 2002 to 195 cases in 2003.

"These diseases can be reduced through targeted prevention efforts," Hull said. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) recommends that latex condoms, when used consistently and correctly, can reduce the risk of getting STDs.

To combat the epidemic, the MDH Partner Services Program provides follow-up to both people with sexually transmitted diseases and their sexual partners who may need examination and treatment. In addition, MDH has expanded its chlamydia and gonorrhea screening efforts with eight clinics serving areas with the highest rates of infection.

"As with other diseases, STDs disproportionately impact certain populations," Dr. Hull said. "There are definitely groups that we need to make every effort to reach."

"Teens and young adults continue to share the greatest burden of STDs in Minnesota," Dr. Hull said.

they should stop eating fish, McCann said. The oils in fish are important for brain and eye development. The advisory provides guidelines for people in these groups. For example, while one meal a week of locally caught panfish would not pose a health risk, people in the group should not eat any large walleye, large northern pike, shark, or swordfish. There are many species of fish that can be eaten twice per week by this group.

In March, the Food and Drug Administration published new data on levels of mercury in commercial fish. "We've revised our advice in the 'Expectant Mother's Guide' to reflect these changes in reported mercury concentrations," McCann said. Of note is the change in advice for canned tuna - two meals per week for canned "light" and two meals per month for canned "white" tuna. "Unfortunately, mercury levels in canned 'white' (albacore) tuna are higher than canned 'light' tuna," she said.

MDH continues to recommend eating all types of salmon - canned, fresh wild-caught and farm-raised. Although the levels of contaminants in farm-raised salmon are higher than wild-caught salmon, the levels are still relatively low and it is a good food choice. Contaminants are higher in farm-raised salmon because of the processed feed, McCann said.

For most people, two meals of fish per week are generally considered optimal for balancing the health benefits and the health risk from contaminants in fish. "Choosing which fish to eat for those meals is important to minimize exposure to mercury and other chemicals in fish. Following the MDH fish consumption guidelines keeps your exposure to a

"We need to continue to educate young Minnesotans about the risks of unprotected sex and ways to stop the spread of STDs." About 7 out of 10 reported chlamydia cases and about 1 out of 2 reported gonorrhea cases occurred among adolescents and young adults.

Although the highest rates of STDs are in the Twin Cities metropolitan area, the rates are also increasing among suburban and greater Minnesota residents. Chlamydia and gonorrhea have continued their upward climb for several years. Rates remain elevated among communities of color.

Syphilis has increased among gay and bisexual men in the Minneapolis and St. Paul area for the last two years. In 2003, 42 percent of the cases among gay and bisexual men were also infected with HIV, the virus that causes AIDS. Health officials warn that persons at increased risk of getting syphilis include those that meet their sexual partners at bars, nightclubs, Internet and phone chat lines. Alcohol and methamphetamines have also been connected to recent cases.

safe level," McCann said. "The right fish choice depends on each person and his or her health status."

Considering this, people who need to be very careful about the amount of mercury they consume, such as pregnant women, may want to choose the "light" canned tuna instead of albacore canned tuna and smaller locally-caught fish. An older person or men in general may choose a certain fish based on its content of beneficial Omega-3 oils more than on its mercury content.

General statewide consumption guidelines are available online at www.health.state.mn.us/divs/eh/fish/index.html and in the form of an eight-page brochure, "Eat Fish Often?" that is available by contacting MDH at 651-215-0950 or 1-800-657-3908.

More detailed, site-specific

Health officials emphasize that gonorrhea, chlamydia and syphilis can be spread through unprotected oral, anal and vaginal sex. Once detected, these diseases can be treated and cured with antibiotics. If left untreated, however, chlamydia and gonorrhea can cause infertility. Untreated syphilis can lead to blindness, brain damage, heart problems and even death. Sexually transmitted diseases can also increase the risk of getting infected with HIV or spreading it to others.

The complete STD Surveillance Report 2003 and STD fact sheets can be found on the MDH web site at <http://www.health.state.mn.us>. The new CDC treatment guidelines for STDs are available online at <http://www.cdc.gov/std>. People can call the Minnesota Family Planning & STD Hotline, toll free, at 1-800-78-FACTS (voice or TTY) for confidential information about the prevention, testing locations and treatment of STDs.

recommendations are available on the MDH Web site or by contacting MDH. The recommendations have been updated this year with information on additional lakes and rivers that have been tested. Detailed recommendations are also available in the Lake Survey Reports produced by the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources (DNR). The Lake Survey Reports are also available online at www.dnr.state.mn.us/lakefind/index.html.

Journey Through Negatives to find positive in HIV/AIDS

By Boyd Andrew Catt-Iron Shell, Guest Indian Country Today Columnist

I have been on a journey. Four years ago I was called upon to work with the issues of HIV/AIDS. At times I serve as a scout, forewarning of the dangers before us. At times, I must stake myself to the earth and stand my ground on behalf of those who can not speak for themselves. I was told that many of our people are dying silently around us. Silence caused by people not listening to the voice within. Dying because too often the noise of government policy and bureaucracy silence the Native American. Are we listening to the dangers that our ancestors said was coming? Their awakening came in the form of a warm wool blanket. A blanket covered with small pox. They were caught by surprise. Not aware of what they needed to do to protect themselves. I'm here today to tell you that we as Native people, do not have the pretext of getting caught off guard. I'm here today to tell you that HIV/AIDS is 100% preventable.

I can only speak of the realities as I see them in my own communities. I can only speak as an individual who also struggles with the same challenges that my community and family share. We are all born into the struggle. For some, it's hard to place value on sexual safety when your priorities are in fighting to just get by from day to day. Some fall into the role of victim. Some buy into a non-native lifestyle that isn't always best for our personal well being. We can condemn ourselves, let out side forces condemn us or we can utilize our inner strengths and ancestral direction and over come the challenges that present to us in these contemporary times.

Many words have been said romatizing the people called American Indian. As a Native, I can take these words in a matter of different context. They can portray ignorance, curiosity, or admiration. I often wonder why we are looked at with great awe, like a caged tiger at the zoo. In the span that it takes to swallow down another drink of my coffee, I come to my conclusion. In spite of generations of attacks against our natural identity, we still represent strength in this world that others feel they don't have. We may not always live in accordance of the purity that our ancestors held. Through DNA or our intergenerational relationship to our collective past, the modern day "Indian" still holds thoughts, vision and feelings just as alive and integrated to our human spirit and our natural surroundings as was held by our ancestors. It is this inner guidance, this natural identity that defines us as Native American and that must be the foundation of which we address all our challenges. We can utilize the gifts and powers involved in our Native cultures and empower our selves and generations moving forward around us. If we take the time to give value to the ancestral mentality within us, it will clarify much of the misdirection we cling to in our daily lives.

The real cure for HIV/AIDS will not be found in the masses. It can be found within. I honestly believe that the cure for HIV/AIDS in our Native populations can be found within each and every one of us. The non-Indian would like to place their cure in science and medicine. They are comfortable trusting this format as they don't place as much value on natural components like spirituality, community and feelings as many of our Native cultures do. By placing our cure within our own traditions, by being responsible for self, we keep alive the power of our identity, rightfully placing it within ourselves. It is this potential strength that other cultures and non-Indian society sees as they romantize about us.

I am confident that medical scholars of this world will create the drugs that cure HIV/AIDS as we know it today. They may cure the bio-medical component of HIV/AIDS but this will not cure the frailties of human behavior that lead to HIV/AIDS. By not addressing the dangers of our actions or behaviors, a medical cure is only a Trojan horse and not really a cure as defined in Webster's book of good white words. When we address our healing through validation of our inner strengths and address our self weaknesses, than we will truly eliminate HIV/AIDS and the individual co-factors that can lead to that disease.

The common element of all Tribal Nations on the American continents is the concept of RESPECT. The integrity of our social and spiritual law is defined by having self and mutual respect. When you take away all the excuses of how people acquired HIV/AIDS, the main reason is because they didn't take the time for self respect or mutual respect. Our ancestors did not know that something as simple as latex could define weather or not our generations would move forward. I am sure that they would tell us to use condoms if that is what it takes to ensure protection of ourselves and our future.

How will we explain to our children the reason we are lying in that hospital bed dying of AIDS complications? Can we admit we did not have enough respect for ourselves to wear a condom or turn away from risky behaviors? At that time, will our children think we are cheapskates for not spending $1.25 for one latex condom which could have saved our life? Probably not. What they will think is that they are being robbed by losing their loved one to a disease

Our ancestors took great sacrifice so that we could live. We must not let their prayers and actions be in vain.

AIDS Educator, Lisa Tiger, Gives Birth to Healthy and Beautiful Baby Girl!

By Patsy Gordon

Like many of you, I have been curious and wondering how Lisa Tiger, who is infected with the HIV/AIDS virus, has been doing. In the April issue of the De-Bah-Ji-Mon, Lisa's story was reprinted with her permission from the Well Nations Magazine. We do have back copies of this issue available, if you never got to read her story and would like to. Lisa came to Leech Lake a few years back and told her story about how she deals with her life living with the AIDS virus.

Today, May 11th, I spoke with Lisa by telephone. I found her to be very cordial and friendly and she continues to be active with AIDS education. Lisa gave birth to her new daughter on March, 12th, 2004. Her doctors had scheduled a C-section for Lisa on March 22nd, but Lisa said, "She came early." Cornelia Margaret Taluda Dana Tiger came into the world weighing 6 pounds and 9 ounces. Lisa is so proud and happy to announce that her new little bundle of joy is "perfectly healthy"! Lisa says, "She is so beautiful!" She is named after several people in Lisa's family. Dana is also Lisa's sisters name. Taluda means cricket in the Cherokee language. The name Taluda comes from Lisa's father (Jerome Tiger) who died of an accidental self-inflicted gunshot wound in 1967.

Before her father died, he told them that he would come back as a cricket. Lisa's husband, Diego, never knew her father, but upon discussing the thought of having a baby, Diego, make the remark that he wanted them to have a baby girl and name her Cricket. Lisa said, "Cricket - after my Dad?" Diego replied, "Your Dads' name was Cricket?" She told him "No, but he told people that after he died he would come back as a cricket." Lisa said her Dad told her that "Whenever you hear a cricket, you know I will be near". Hence, came the name Cricket!

Lisa remained in the hospital for three weeks after giving birth to her little girl. Her fever, at times, reached as high as 105.6. She suffered with night sweats and other AIDS related illnesses. As of this date, Lisa is still waiting for some of the test results they did on her while in the hospital. Although, Lisa said, "I'm feeling fine!"

Lisa's mother had been very active with Lisa and her 4 adopted children throughout the past 8 years, ever since the children came to live with her and had been looking forward to helping her daughter raise her new little girl. Unfortunately, shortly before the birth, her mother was involved in a near fatal car crash. She broke her neck, her legs and her ribs. As a result of the accident, she also suffered a series of strokes that brought on brain trauma. Lisa said she just never was the same after that, and although she still remains in the hospital, she is getting better. She recognizes and knows all of her family and on Mothers Day of this year when Lisa visited her, she said she could understand her better as well too. Before the accident happened, her mother had been working on her PHD, and was employed with the Cherokee Nation.

Lisa's closing statement to me was, "People are still not practicing safe sex, so I'm still interested in doing AIDS education!"

Lisa and her family live in Oklahoma, but will split their time between Oklahoma and Santa Fe where her husband's family lives.

Good luck, Lisa! Our best wishes are with you always.

Letter from the Editor:

I want to take this opportunity to let the Debahjimon readers know that I, as the Editor of the newspaper, will be going on a leave of absence for 3 months, if all works out as planned. I have thoroughly enjoyed working with the different programs, interviewing the elders, photographing events and people, doing the stories, etc. I absolutely love doing this kind of work.

But as of right now, I'm not sure what the paper publication production is going to be for July August and September, but I'm sure something will be worked out.

I hope to be back in September and release the October issue on schedule. Have a great summer!

HIV/AIDS to many is very misunderstood. Four years ago, it was to me. In the journey I am living, I can see that it is much more than another disease trying to destroy our Native people. It is a health issue, it is a sovereignty issue, and it is a human issue. There are many more things than just the disease that needs to be discussed. The practice of respect is what is the best protection on an individual level. If you have self-respect, you will respect others. Our Tribal leaders must have enough respect for the people to talk about the challenges in dealing with HIV/AIDS in our Tribal communities. They must be the ones to look at why our children are having children. What role does incest play? What role does substance abuse play? What role does the break down of family structure play? These are issues that contribute to why sex, alcohol and risky behaviors are being used as replacements for love and respect among our people. How does one find self esteem in an environment which conditions us to play the victim? Too often, sexual predators are uncontested violators to the spirit of our women and children. Many predators wear the mask of a friend, a relative or a disrespectful partner. When we fail to skill our people with the knowledge they need for self-value and responsible sexual health, the possibility for abuse, unintended pregnancy and preventable disease is a probable reality. Our identity as Native people should no longer be accepted as the face of a statistic and the voice of disparity.

Indian country is a very good candidate for an all out HIV/AIDS epidemic. Many Tribal communities operate in crisis mode. With the already overwhelming challenges that our Tribal health system face on a daily basis, inadequate funding, politics, and extreme disparities, HIV/AIDS tends to fall silently into the shadows. While many debate its prevalence, the cycle of infection continues to grow much like alcoholism, diabetes and cancers which have cultivated in our Tribal communities until they become so large a problem that we had no choice but to address them.

The journey I am on is not lead by the grim reaper. The tools to address HIV/AIDS are there for the taking on both an individual, community and leadership level. Respect and action do not cost a thing but our very lives may depend on it. Our ancestors took great sacrifice so that we could live. We must not let their prayers and actions be in vain. If we are to survive as Native people, free from HIV/AIDS and the many diseases we are challenged with, we must not be afraid to look beyond the comfort of our own selves and do at least as much as our ancestors have done for us. That is the journey advocating for HIV/AIDS prevention has shown me so far.

She loved her home community, the people and nature, but especially the trees. She was a member of the St. Charles Catholic Church, St. Mary's Altar Society, Kateri Tekawitha Circle, Cass Lake Local Indian Council, and the Northwestern MN Juvenile Center Board of Directors.

ELIZABETH (TAYLOR) LEMON

Elizabeth (Taylor) Lemon died at the age of 95.

Mrs. Lemon was born at the current site of the Che Wa Ka E Gon store on the Leech Lake Reservation. She attended an Indian girls boarding school at Tomah, Wisconsin where she was a witty and quick learner. While in boarding school she met many friends from other reservations that she would keep in contact with through out her life.

She always stressed the importance of education with her children, grand children and foster children. While working at a hospital in Wisconsin she met her husband Gavino Lemon who she was married to for over fifty years. The couple spent much of their retirement years living in Cass Lake and their home was a favorite place for the older folks to gather and play cards. She is preceded in death by her father Peter Taylor and Charlotte (Partridge) Taylor of Onigum and brother John and sister Gladys. Her children were Dominic, John Sr., Tony (deceased) Juanita (Lemon) Swan and Mike Castillo. The grand children were (Dominic's) Pauline, Tony, Gregory, Norin, Kevin, and Denise. (John's) John Jr. deceased, Douglas, Mike, Dan, Joe and Gina. (Juanita's) John Herrera and Nancy Meyers. In addition, she leaves numerous great grandchildren and great-great grand children services were held at St. Charles Catholic Church Friday morning with burial at Pine Grove cemetery.
