Artist Profile : Bob “Punk” Wakanabo

Submitted by Wakanabo Family

Bob “Punk” Wakanabo was born May 10, 1950 in Cass Lake, Minnesota on the Leech Lake Reservation. He lived in Minneapolis for 11 years and then decided to move back to the Leech Lake Reservation. It was there that Bob’s interest in his culture and its historical significance started to surface.

While on the Reservation, Bob worked for the Head Start Program, and as a paralegal for Legal Services. He later worked for the Department of Natural Resources as a laborer before becoming a professional artist.

Bob has not had any formal training in art, it is a gift he has from within. One that he realized he needed to explore. Bob started his art career by sketching cartoons and painting signs in his spare time. He was soon joined in his hobby by his daughter. Bob would put his thoughts out on his canvas and his daughter would do her best to copy his early works. He would often know what his painting would look like before he even brushed a stroke.

Later Bob's hobby took a serious turn as he began working on his first professional piece, but before he could finish tragedy struck. His only daughter, Breanna Leigh, was killed by a school bus outside his home. Breanna Leigh never got to see his finished professional piece. Following the loss of his beloved daughter, Bob went into a state of depression, anger and began to abuse alcohol.

Bob later realized that drinking was not going to bring back his daughter or heal his loss. He decided to use his energy in a more productive manner. It took one year before his inner talent began to resurface and he started painting full time again.

In addition to throwing himself into artwork, Bob became very active with the school bus safety task force of Minnesota. He spent endless hours lobbying to get school bus monitors aboard vehicles. He was later appointed by the MN Governor to the School Bus Safety Advisory Committee.

Bob's lobbying was successful as Bug-O-Nay-Ge-Shig was one of the first schools to have school bus monitors. School bus drivers are now required to undergo training, and have monitors aboard.

Art Career

Bob's professional career is vast and expands decades. He now has 500 original artworks to his credit.

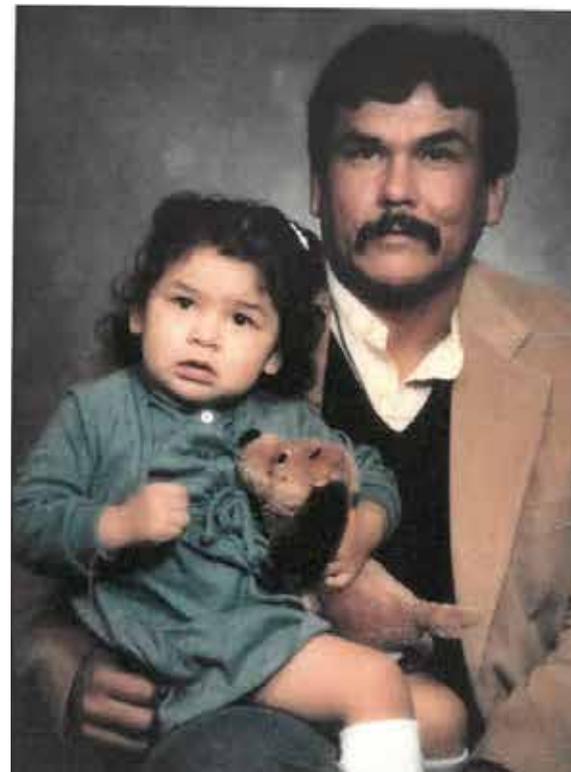

His first print "Grand Entry" was showcased on the cover of the Twin Lights magazine, which is published in London, England. He has been awarded numerous awards, including the 1994 "Artist of the Year" for the Great Lakes Region Native American Fish and Wildlife Society for his Seventh print entitled "Dreams of the Summer Hunt."

Bob had another painting entitled "The Strength of Our People-The Women" win third place in the People's Choice at the 1994 Powwow and Art show in Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

In September of 1999 at the Indian art expo and market in Bismarck, ND his painting "Warrior Society (RET)" took second place honors. Also, in September 2000, two of his originals titled "Dreamcatcher" and "Traditional Dancer" were awarded 1st place and 3rd place honors respectively.

Bob has been commissioned by the Center of Disease Control in Albuquerque, New Mexico to do a poster for the abuse of Tobacco, which was sent out nationwide. He has also been commissioned by KFC and the Public Health Service. Two of Bob's brothers are also involved in his business. His brother Vern worked as his sales representative, and his other brother Ron is the master at matting and framing prints.

For the past 8 years he's donated an original piece to the radiothon held at KBUN radio station in Bemidji and Brainerd, MN to help end child abuse.

In May of 2000, he was featured as a world-famous artist while donating an original painting to the American Diabetes Association Celebrity Art Auction in St. Paul, MN. He was also the only Native American Artist to be chosen to participate in the Black-Tie event hosted by the Governor and his First Lady.

A unique feature about Bob's paintings are the many hidden objects in each of his works. Another unique feature about Bob's paintings are that each painting he does comes with a story explaining his work of art. Each painting is culturally expressed and one of a kind.

Most of Bob's ideas for his paintings come to him in sweat lodges, listening to elders speak of the past, mother earth, the animals and the four directions. Bob got the idea for his first painting from his involvement in a drum group and by going to many powwows. He is a member of the Metig O Me Shanz drum group and was a traditional dancer. He has learned to pray for other people not just when they are sick or a problem arises, but to be thankful for the water, the trees the fire, and the elders with all of their knowledge and for the gift of art that he has.

Bob signs all of his prints "Punk/BLD". BLD stands for Breanna Leighs' Dad in memory of his daughter.

Anishinaabe Culture Skills Camp

Submitted by Tanya Roerick, Wildlife Biologist LLBO Division of Resource Management

This past October the Leech Lake Division of Resource Management hosted an Anishinaabe Culture Skills Camp for youth! Eighteen youth spent a four day weekend learning how to hunt, trap, net fish and camp with DRM staff and mentors from the surrounding community. The camp aimed to engage youth that had little or no experience hunting and teach them the skills they needed to be successful hunters in the future. It was also an opportunity to teach youth more about their culture and heritage.

Each morning the kids woke up before light and picked which hunting activity they wanted to do – deer, waterfowl, or grouse hunting. Mentors then took their assigned youth out and taught them valuable skills on how to hunt the game of their choosing. One youth was even lucky enough to harvest their very first deer! The days would then continue with bringing in nets and learning how to clean fish followed by more hunting in the evening. When the kids were not busy hunting or cleaning fish they were able to practice archery and attend trapping and net tying demonstrations. One evening an Elder visited and spoke about the importance of hunting to the Anishinaabe culture.

Overall the camp was a huge success with memories that will last youth and mentors a life time! This past year's camp was made possible because of a R3 Grant from the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources and many hours of work by DRM staff and mentors. The DRM hopes to host the Anishinaabe Culture Skills Camp on an annual basis so watch for more information next fall!

President Trump Signs Executive Order Establishing Task Force on Missing and Murdered American Indians and Alaska Natives

■ By Kayla Duoos

Washington, DC – President Donald Trump signed an executive order creating a national MMIW (Missing, Murdered, Indigenous Woman) task force, Tuesday November 26.

The task force titled “Operation Lady Justice” will be overseen by Attorney General William Barr and Interior Secretary David Bernhardt. The task force will develop protocols to apply to new and unsolved cases, and create a multi-jurisdictional team from Federal and Tribal law enforcement to review cold cases. In addition to these measurement, the Department of Justice will begin issuing grants to help improve safety in Native American communities.

As a step to better improve communication amongst Tribal and Federal communities, the EO allows tribal or local law enforcement to seek help from the FBI and the Justice Department will conduct an in-depth review of federal databases to determine best practices for collecting data on missing Indigenous people.

Trump, and other White House officials were joined at the official signing by national Native leaders including Melanie Benjamin, Chief Executive of Mille Lacs Band. Benjamin used her time in front of the press to speak to families affected by the ongoing issue.

“..we cannot have this happening anymore. It’s a historical day to know that our missing and murdered women have a place and a remembrance, and that we care about them and their families, said Benjamin.

Tribal Nations Early Learning Language Summit

Cass Lake – The inaugural Tribal Nations Early Learning Language Summit took place November 19-21 at Cedar Lakes Casino.

For three days, professionals in early childhood education and human services gathered to discuss incorporating traditional language in western education settings. Featured panels ranged from STEM (scientific, engineering, math and sciences) education, nation building, lesson planning, sustainability of programs, gathering media resources, and large scale community activities.

Vanessa Goodthunder, a Lower Sioux Tribal member who presented alongside Monique Waase Paulson covered what it means to find resources for classrooms to continue language preservation efforts. Goodthunder is an educator, scholar, and director of the Cansayappi Eskayeza Owayawa Oti—a Dakota immersion headstarter. The school is the first of its kind in Minnesota

Goodthunder has previously been featured on large panel discussions and as a solo

speaker regarding language preservation and incorporating traditional teachings in education. Goodthunder shared her beliefs on what it means to teach the language to the next generation.

“The thing about learning with people is that it’s about relationships. It’s about your student. I don’t see children and teaching, as ‘I’m the teacher and you’re the student and I have this wealth of knowledge and I’m going to give it to you.’ Children are born with the language, they know who they are. I’m simply just giving them the tools and resources for them to thrive,” said Goodthunder.

Alongside Goodthunder present at the conference is a voice in education, a little closer to home. Leslie Harper, a Leech Lake band member and president of the National Coalition of American Language Schools and Programs, helped plan the event and was featured as a keynote speaker.

In Harpers closing statement she shared the importance of the three days of work attendees did as well as spoke to her frustration on having to tell people what the benefits of language learning are, when it’s such an obvious statement to those who are enveloped in the culture.

“Its 2019. We have maybe a couple handfuls of Ojibwe speakers left in our community, why must we explain why preserving our language and culture is important? We are asserting our rights as self governing citizens, why is it not important enough for us just to want to simply live as we are Education is a treaty obligation to our people, it is a right for us to speak our language. I am done, I am done with explaining these are the benefits it is enough that I am human I am Ojibwe I am alive, that these children are human, are ojibwe, are alive. They have a right to speak their language. We do not have to justify that,” said Harper.

Leech Lake currently is addressing language preservation in a number of ways including elders language recordings, phrase of the days on KOJB radio station, the Bug-O-Nay-Ge-Shig Nigaane immersion school, and Leech Lake Tribal College courses.

BY KAYLA DUOOS

Cass Lake – The Leech Lake Band of Ojibwe Homeless Shelter is officially open.

The shelter was first approved by the Leech Lake Tribal Council in Spring 2019 and Hawk Construction broke ground on the site in April. Planning for the project was led by a team comprised of employees from Leech Lake Human Services, Tribal Development, Purchasing, Accounting, and the Construction Manager and Assistant, as well as staff from Hawk Construction.

Tribal Chairman Faron Jackson, who was present at the grand opening ceremony said caring for all tribal members has always been a goal of the council and seeing this shelter to completion is one of the ways councils and LLBO staff have proved that.

“I got really emotional when I went into the building and when I saw the family rooms, because I know how important families are to all of us. A lot of us have put family up in our homes or good friends. That's because of the love we have for each other. We're all in this together. We're all here to take care of one another,” said Jackson.

The grand opening was attended by the Tribal council, Cass County and Itasca officials as well as LLBO staff who helped get the emergency shelter running.

The shelter has a capacity of 56; 10 beds in the men's dormitory, and 10 beds in the women's dormitory, as well as 6 family units capable of housing up to 6 family members each. In addition, there are three separate living areas for men, women, and families.

There will be a computer room for adults to apply for jobs, search for housing, as well as a large dining area with a commercial kitchen and two laundry rooms. There is also a reception/intake office, a nurse's room, and five individual offices.

The shelter will be staffed 24/7 by Shelter Technicians. There will also be a House Manager, two Case Managers, a nurse, and two kitchen staff. For information regarding employment at the shelter please visit the Leech Lake website (www.llo-jibwe.org).

The Leech Lake Human Services department who will be staffing and operating the shelter said the new center will provide more than a place for tribal members to stay.

“The shelter will be more than a bed and a roof. The vision is to provide various services to individuals and families to help them secure stable housing, such as; case management, service referrals, integration with Health and Human Services, assistance with job searches, etc. These services will be key in helping families overcome their barriers to stable housing.”

For more information, please contact the Leech Lake Human Services Office (218) 335-8273.

Chairman Faron Jackson signals the opening of the newly constructed Homeless Shelter with ribbon cutting.

Hank was a wonderful man in too many ways to list, but we will try. He was an excellent husband to his bride of 38 years, Henrietta and a great dad to his children.
